A message from the Festival Director

Hello Everyone,

It is my privilege to welcome you to the 2009 Great Hudson River Revival, Clearwater's annual music and environmental festival.

This year is a very special one for Clearwater. We are celebrating the 90th birthday of the festival's founder, Pete Seeger, as well as the 400th anniversary of Henry Hudson's first sail up the river that would take his name and the 40th anniversary of the launch of the sloop Clearwater.

While the year is steeped in anniversary and tradition, it's also one of transition for our festival. Clearwater is proud to be building the next generation of environmental leaders, and the Festival is thrilled to welcome some new world class voices to our stages to join some old friends and Revival favorites.

The one thing that has not changed here at the Revival is the cast of thousands (literally) that volunteer their time and talent to make the event a reality. They are far too many to name, but please do me the favor of taking a minute and thanking one of the fine folks wearing a volunteer shirt this weekend. My personal thanks goes out to the Revival Leadership Committee, a handful of extremely dedicated people who keep this festival running year after year.

I am honored to be at the helm of the Festival where I spent so much of my youth with my family and to be a part of taking it into the future.

Have a wonderful weekend,

Jon Dindas

ABOUT CLEARWATER

Hudson River Sloop Clearwater, Inc. is a member supported, 501(c)3 tax exempt, nonprofit corporation whose mission is to preserve and protect the Hudson River. In 1966, folk music legend and environmental activist Pete Seeger, in despair over the pollution of his beloved Hudson River, announced plans to "build a boat to save the river."

At the time, the Hudson was rank with raw sewage, toxic chemicals and oil pollution; fish had disappeared over many miles of its length. Seeger believed a majestic replica of the sloops that sailed the Hudson in the 18th and 19th centuries would bring people to the river, where they could experience its beauty and be moved to preserve it.

Inspired by that vision, the 106-foot-long tall ship Clearwater was built and launched in 1969.

The sloop was among the first vessels in the U.S. to conduct science-based environmental education aboard a sailing ship, virtually creating the template by which such programs are conducted around the world today.

Since the launch of the Clearwater, more than half a million young people and countless adults have experienced their first real look at an estuary's ecosystem—fish, invertebrates, water chemistry and ecological principals—aboard the sloop. Clearwater's environmental education programs now serve more than 15,000 students annually, and the organization also educates over 200 teachers each year through SUNY New Paltz, Pace University and other institutions.

Clearwater's members have helped advocate for the Clean Water Act, the Hudson River Park Act and removal of PCB's from the Hudson.

The Clearwater, America's Environmental Flagship, was named to the National Register of Historic Places in 2004 for its role in the environmental movement. Each summer, Clearwater re-connects Hudson Valley residents with their cultural heritage and traditions by bringing them down to the river for the Great Hudson River Revival, the country's oldest music and environmental festival. The organization and its local sloop clubs also sponsor smaller local riverfront festivals throughout the year.

Clearwater's unique approach to public outreach has made the sloop Clearwater a symbol of grassroots action through hands-on learning, music and celebration.

The Sloop Clearwater: Learning on the River

By Samantha Heyman

The Hudson River, formerly called Muheakuntuck (meaning "the river that flows both ways") by its native inhabitants, is a tidal estuary and home to over 200 different species of fish. It is a major artery of maritime commerce with no less than seven tug companies working the waves, and many other shipping operations carrying all kinds of goods up and down the river—gravel, scrap metal, heating oil, sugar, garbage and sludge from sewage treatment plants. A daily destination for thousands of people walking, jogging and bicycling in the parks located on its banks, from Riverside Park in Manhattan to Lighthouse Park in Saugerties, the Hudson also stars as part of an incredible panorama, viewed from the multi-million-dollar residences atop Battery Park to those tucked in the hills around Hyde Park and well beyond.

For me, the Hudson River is my workplace and my home from April to November. As a full-time employee of Clearwater, the environmental organization based in Poughkeepsie, NY, I live and work aboard the 106-foot long, 108-foot tall sloop Clearwater, and sail up and down the Hudson River daily, in sun and rain, storm and calm, with an ever-changing variety of passengers. My tools, instead of a computer or chalkboard, are the sloop's sails and rigging, a thirty-foot trawl net, her 190-horse power engine and the 8-foot long tiller we use to steer the ship.

Almost everyday during our sailing season, my crew and I welcome a new group of students on board the Clearwater and we turn the Hudson River into their classroom using the tides and currents, the fish and plankton, and the deck of our ship to get them excited about ecology, stewardship, chemistry, physics and even math.

These students, many of whom have never been out on a boat before, help us cast our net and retrieve it, work together to raise our 3000-lb mainsail, test the water for characteristics like salinity and pH, and, of course, get to grasp the tiller and steer the boat.

This year over 15,000 kids will get their first look at a river ecosystem on the Clearwater, a seaworthy replica of the 18th and 19th century sloops that once populated the Hudson like taxis in midtown. It was Pete Seeger's vision back in 1969 that building and launching this sloop would inspire people to make a difference and help clean up the river.

And he was right.

So many lessons spring from this unique platform on the river, and education becomes a tangible and truly awesome thing: You can see it the moment a student figures out how the river currents flow when she realizes that, though we seem to be sailing north, we are actually moving south, or when he understands that the greenish-brown color of the river is a good thing, due not to pollution, but to the plankton that live there and photosynthesize carbon dioxide the same way that trees do.

In just a few hours, we see the students on-board the Clearwater gain a sense of ownership and respect as they learn about the watershed as a whole and their place in it. It is hard work, but worth every stormy day to spend my time with these young people, tacking back and forth across the sometimes capricious, sometimes calm, yet always mighty Hudson River.

For forty years the Clearwater has brought people of all ages back down to a river that had been cut off to them, reconnecting them to the waterway they now care for as their own. We've created a generation of environmental leaders and will keep up the work. But as we sail into this momentous year, commemorating the history of the renowned explorers who called this river their workplace for a time, let us not forget to celebrate the Hudson itself, a river that has given so much to so many, and continues to do so through a past of terrible abuse and a future of splendid rebirth, offering a myriad of lessons to all.

Samantha Heyman is a captain of the sloop Clearwater.

QUADRICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

This year marks an opportunity to celebrate some remarkable events relating to the exploration of North America and the history of the New York State: the dual 400th anniversaries of Henry Hudson's voyage up the river that now bears his name and Samuel de Champlain becoming the first European to gaze upon the waters of his namesake lake.

Quadricentennial events are taking place throughout 2009 in many communities around the state to mark these two important historical events, as well as the 200th anniversary of inventor Robert Fulton's steamboat journey up the Hudson River. From New York Harbor to Lake Champlain, our Dutch, French and English roots and heritage will be celebrated with an emphasis on how the European discoverers shaped our national identity and brought about cultural diversity and innovation, thus making the Empire State the unique place it is today.

Interestingly, many of the Quadricentennial celebrations plan to highlight ideas regarding environmental and economic sustainability, noting the importance of protecting our natural resources for future generations—which, of course, has been the foundation of the Clearwater mission since our founding forty years ago.

The first New York Medal of Discovery was awarded to folk music legend and activist Pete Seeger, Clearwater's founder, on June 5, at New York City's "Harbor Night" celebration in Battery Park. Many of the ships participating in the Quadricentennial events assembled in front of Liberty Island that evening and there was a Blessing of the Fleet.

On the following day, June 6, the Quadricentennial flotilla, led by the sloop Clearwater and the other tall ships, mustered at the Statue of Liberty and then headed up the Hudson River. The flotilla spent the next several days traveling north, making celebratory stops in many riverside towns and cities and ended in Albany on June 13.

It is hoped that this first annual Hudson River Day will become a Quadricentennial legacy event, taking place during the first weekend of June when boat owners typically put their vessels back on the water.

THE NEXT GENERATION OF ENVIRONMENTAL LEADERS

Having taken a major role in cleaning up the Hudson and fighting pollution everywhere, Clearwater truly understands that to enact important changes you have to first inspire and educate people to do so. Now, with its Next Generation Legacy Project, Clearwater will broaden its mission by bringing together school age children and young adults from our cities, suburbs and small towns to train and prepare them "to pick up the torch," as Seeger likes to say, and create the sustainable world, with green jobs, that we all need.

To create the next generation of environmental leaders, Clearwater is developing a comprehensive educational program that focuses on many of the elements necessary for a green economy, including sustainable energy technologies, best practices in organic farming and employment opportunities in new job sectors.

The Next Generation Legacy Project is divided into three phases along programmatic lines, although parts of each phase will take place concurrently.

First, the Clearwater Center for Leadership and Environmental Justice opened its doors this May at the former University Settlement Camp in Beacon, NY. This will also house Clearwater's new headquarters. Beginning in June 2009, Camp Clearwater will open its doors at the Center and host over one hundred middle school and high school students in three week-long sessions.

Clearwater youth education programs presently reach over 15,000 people each year. At Camp Clearwater, it is planned that several hundred students will be in the "leadership pipeline" at any time, experiencing life-changing programs at camps, seminars, retreats, demonstrations and green jobs programs. With a unique capacity to engage young people with the wonders of the environment, this here, as well as an improvement of the dock facilities at Beacon Harbor to accommodate winter maintenance of the sloop Clearwater. Also, more sloop programs and Camp Clearwater scholarships are planned in this phase.

Finally, the third—and most far-reaching phase of Clearwater's Next Generation project—will be the establishment of eight Green Cities / Green Jobs Satellite Centers in Environmental Leadership along the Hudson River, in partnership with local environmental and community groups. This is to ensure that eight targeted cities / communities—New York City (Harlem), Yonkers, Peekskill, Newburgh, Beacon, Poughkeepsie, Kingston and Albany—have powerful connections to their waterfronts through environmental education programs that will, in turn, support "green" job development and training programs for young people from the region's inner cities.

Clearwater's Next Generation Legacy Project is an ambitious educational initiative that will be dedicated toward creating new leaders for tomorrow's green world first phase pulls together all of Clearwater's extant educational programs—in the schools, on the shoreline and on the boat—and offers longer, more engaging learning opportunities. Over the years, Clearwater's multi-day programs, like Young Women at the Helm and Urban Outreach Internships, have had great success at encouraging young people to become environmentally-responsible citizens and to seek leadership roles in our society. The Clearwater Center promises to continue and formalize this important function for an even greater number of future leaders. It will be open to the public and is bound to become a signature destination point for thousands of visitors each year who want to learn more about our green future.

The second phase of the Next Generation Legacy Project will ensure that inner-city and under-resourced young people will have better access to Clearwater's environmental education and leadership programs. Continuous upgrading and retro-fitting of the Clearwater Center for Leadership and Environmental Justice with green technology and a green jobs demonstration facility is included

Another key part of this third phase is the creation of a fully operational zero-carbon working waterfront facility that will have space for a harbor master, boat maintenance, crew facilities and home port for the sloop Clearwater. Major repairs and restoration of the sloop, our famed "floating classroom," will also be undertaken.

It is anticipated that the first phase of the Next Generation Legacy Project alone will create about 40 new jobs at the new Clearwater Center, not including numerous construction jobs.

Clearwater's longtime strategy of inspiring, educating and activating people is still a powerful formula for success. Utilizing the greatest natural resource in the region—the majestic Hudson River—Clearwater has been the grassroots model for effecting changes to protect our planet. More than ever before, we need to realize a green, sustainable future by investing in our youth and creating the next generation of environmental leaders. This is what Clearwater is now proudly committing its resources to as a part of Pete Seeger's remarkable legacy to the human race.

GREAT HUDSON RIVER REVIVAL 2009

TALENT

The Great Hudson River Revival is produced by the nonprofit, member-supported environmental organization Hudson River Sloop Clearwater, Inc. to raise funds and awareness to protect the river and the earth. All proceeds go directly to support Clearwater's environmental education action and justice efforts to help preserve and safeguard the Hudson River and its tributaries by creating the next generation of environmental leaders.

FESTIVAL PERFORMERS

ALLISON MOORER
Her very first single was nominated for an Academy Award, and her albums have been marked by an artistic restlessness and passion. Allison Moorer's willingness to expose her deepest truths has yielded some of pop music's subtlest, but most enduring treasures, demonstrating diversity, eclecticism and the range of the modern singer-songwriter.

ALEJANDRO ESCOVEDO
Alejandro Escovedo's musical journey has included punk, cow punk, '70s glam rock; roots-rock, alt-country, and string quartets. When asked to define his music, he says, "It's undefinable," and then adds with a smile, "It's just based on having a good record collection!"

ARLO GUTHRIE
Arlo Guthrie was born with a guitar in one hand, a harmonica in the other, and the natural-born storyteller's gift. The eldest son of Woody Guthrie, he grew up with the music of The Weavers and other legends of the Folk revival of the 60's. Then came "Alice's Restaurant" and he's been touring the world ever since.

ARM-OF-THE-SEA
Arm-of-the-Sea combines visual storytelling with live music in original works of mask & puppet theater. This year's production, "Mutual Strangers: Henry Hudson & the River That Discovered Him," is based on events surrounding Hudson's 1609 voyage on the river that now bears his name.

BABA JAMAL KORAM
Baba Jamal Koram is a dedicated practitioner and teacher of the African American spoken word traditions. He is a respected leader in the world of storytelling who uses stories to uplift, inspire, and encourage the positive growth of our communities.

THE BIG BAND SOUND
The Big Band Sound 20-piece jazz orchestra recreates the irresistible sounds of the swing era and beyond, performing classic compositions from all the famous big bands, past and present, from jumping jive to slow and sweet.

BOWERS & WINSTON
Roots reggae. Love songs, dance songs, stories... that is Bowers and Winston. The band has been reviewed as creating "... a world guaranteed to please the ears, minds, feet, and souls of people from Tokyo to Rio."

CARAVAN OF THIEVES
Stretching the parameters of acoustic swing, Caravan of Thieves has been winning immediate praise for their new and unique brand of gypsy-flavored songwriting and their high intensity show. Seeking inspiration from beyond the great divide, the quartet produces layers of Beatlesque vocals, driving rhythms, satirical, dramatic songwriting and an overall circus of sound.

CLIFFSIDE PUSHER
Coming together from the various corners of the American musical landscape, Cliffsidepush shares a passion for live electronic music. With influences steeped in blues, funk, jazz and rock, Cliffsidepush offers a pulsating and memorable musical experience that respects and incorporates their roots.

CORNMEAL
Cornmeal continues to transcend the boundaries of Bluegrass, Americana, and folk for a whole new generation of music lovers. Like "Old and in the Way"? John Hartford? New Grass Revival? Well, then, you're already a Cornmeal fan, even if you don't know it yet!

FESTIVAL PERFORMERS

DAN EINBENDER
 Musician and storyteller Dan Einbender attended his first Revival back in 1979, and was hooked for life. He worked on the sloop Clearwater as a cook and educator, and currently coordinates Clearwater's Power of Song program in the Beacon Schools.

DAVIS BATES
 Davis volunteered aboard the Clearwater as a singer and storyteller in 1982. He has been coming back ever since. Davis has won an award for his recording Family Stories and is farm manager for the Double Edge Theatre in Ashfield, MA.

DOG ON FLEAS
 Dog on Fleas has been performing and recording intelligent, gutsy music for kids and adults since 1999. They revel in diverse sounds and styles of music, keeping it both loose and tight so you can dance with a grin on.

DONNA NESTLER
 Multi-instrumentalist Donna (guitar, flute, hammered dulcimer, bassoon, harmonica, concertina) currently loves the banjolele. Be careful, her enthusiasm for the ukulele is contagious! The styles of music are varied, but will make you smile. And you may go home strumming!

DR. DOG

A Year of Victories and New Challenges for Clearwater's Environmental Action

The Long-Awaited PCB Clean Up Begins: On May 15, 2009 – the year of Pete Seeger's 90th Birthday, Clearwater's 40th and the 400th Anniversary of Henry Hudson's arrival in the New World—we celebrated the beginning of the long-awaited clean up of the over 1.3 million pounds of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCB) which General Electric discharged into the Hudson River. Using sealed clam-shell dredges, GE is now working 24-hours a day, 6 days a week from May until the river freezes to remediate the first phase of contaminated-sediments from the upper Hudson River. What a wonderful birthday present for our founder, who has worked so tirelessly to assure the Hudson River was restored to its original state of health and beauty!

Although GE has agreed to do this first, critical phase of dredging, they still have the option of opting out of the second phase, to remove the remainder of the PCB-contaminated sediment from forty miles of hotspots in the upper Hudson. Under Superfund Law and a 2006 Consent Order, if GE opts out and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has to undertake Phase 2, EPA can charge GE triple damages for the costs they incur. Hopefully GE will see the wisdom in completing this work themselves.

Clearwater Becomes a Party in Indian Point Relicensing Case:

This past year brought another major favorable decision when the Atomic Safety Licensing Board (ASLB) of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) accepted two of Clearwater's six contentions for hearing in the Indian Point relicensing case, making us a formal party in the upcoming hearings. The purpose of the hearings is for the ASLB to decide whether or not it is safe to extend Indian Point Nuclear Power Plant 40-year operating licenses for Units 2 and 3, which will expire in 2013 and 2015 for an additional 20 years. Clearwater joins Riverkeeper and NY State Attorney General's Office and Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) as parties with standing. Clearwater's first accepted contention asserts that Entergy's Environmental Report (ER) failed to adequately address the impacts of known and unknown leaks. The ASLB consolidated this contention with a similar contention filed by Riverkeeper and we are working with Riverkeeper to prove this contention. We are also asserting a unique Environmental Justice contention that the ER contains a seriously flawed analysis of the disproportionate impacts of relicensing on the minority, low-income and disabled populations in the area surrounding Indian Point. Special thanks to Clearwater board member Stephen Filler, Esq. and to Ross Gould, Esq. for all their work on this case.

Rockland County Desalination Plant: On March 19, 2009, Clearwater submitted another contention, on which the ASLB has yet to rule. The new contention states that both the Environmental Report (ER) and the NRC's Draft Supplemental Environmental Impact

“Clearwater's ongoing work on watershed awareness and protection continues”

Statement (DSEIS) fail to adequately assess the impacts of the license renewal on drinking water quality and potential degradation as it relates to the use of the Hudson River as a source of drinking water. The basis for this argument was that NYS DEC assumed lead agency status for an application by United Water of NY/ Suez to construct a 10-million gallon per day desalination plant in Haverstraw Bay, just 3.5 miles southwest of Indian Point. It is known that the groundwater under Indian Point exceeds drinking water standards for radioactive isotopes, including strontium-90, cesium-137 and tritium. It is not known how much of this radioactive material is leaking through fractured bedrock under the plant into the Hudson River or how it is transported through the river. Reverse osmosis, the treatment for removing salt, will not effectively remove most radioactive isotopes. The proposed Haverstraw Water Supply Project will also have potentially detrimental effects on the spawning grounds and nursery habitat that Haverstraw Bay provides to our imperiled Hudson River fish populations. On May 28th, 2009, the ASLB decided not to admit the Rockland County contention as a new contention, but to hear the concerns Clearwater raised about drinking water as a possible route of exposure to radiation under the already admitted contention on the leaks.

Advancing Environmental Justice in the Hudson Valley: In addition to our expanded mission to create the next generation of environmental leaders, Clearwater is deeply committed to promoting environmental justice (“EJ”) in the region by both minimizing environmental harm to communities of color and low income, but also by assuring that environmental goods and assets are distributed fairly. Through a grant from NYS DEC's Office of Environmental Justice, Clearwater is partnering with the Citizens for Equal Environmental Protection to perform a comprehensive environment justice inventory in Peekskill, along with a revised Angler Survey and a Youth Empowerment project coordinated by none other than Decora Lloyd Sandiford of the ReadNex Poetry Squad – a hip hop favorite here at Revival.

Our ongoing work on watershed awareness and protection continues in the Rondout, Fallkill, Kinderhook and Catskill Creeks, as well as in partnership with the Hudson River Watershed Alliance.

Stop by the Environmental Action tent to sign our petitions and volunteer to help Clearwater protect the ecology of the Hudson River and the quality of life for people living in the watershed.

GREEN LIVING EXPO

The Green Living Expo features exhibitors who will help guide your purchasing decisions to have minimum environmental impact and maximum value.

Do you wish you could live more sustainably, but aren't quite sure how to go about it? Clearwater's Green Living Expo offers an array of products and services that will help you make choices that integrate respect for the environment into your daily lifestyle.

Green procurement is purchasing of products and/or services that are distinguished because they either minimizing negative environmental impact or enhancing positive ones. This begins by asking yourself simple questions: Do I really need this product? Is there any way to reduce my consumption, share or reuse? When you do need to purchase something new, look for products that utilize recycled content, nontoxic materials and sustainable energy resources. By practicing green purchasing, and wherever possible buying local, you are making the conscious decision to actively support green products and services, increasing their demand and promoting the growth of sustainable industries and strengthening local economies. This in turn reduces the demand for products and services with negative environmental impacts, and lowers the costs and emissions associated with long-distance transportation.

Please visit our 6th Annual Green Living Expo tent across from the Activist Area to explore the opportunities for sustainable living, and most importantly to become aware of the everyday actions you can take to support a healthy and health-promoting environment. We have the power as individuals and as consumers to be the bearers of great change by taking advantage of green procurement, and by making a decision for the environment, instead of against it.

Creek CHIC

It is hip to be green. Global warming, sustainable energy, carbon footprint – these are all words we hear at least once a day, if not more. Yet as we drive on our highways and along our neighborhood streets we still see garbage on the side of the road – candy wrappers, styrofoam cups, potato chip bags. There seems to be an educational disconnect. On one hand people are learning how to save the world from global warming while with the other they throw their cigarette butt out the car window. Not only does this litter impact the beauty of our landscape, but eventually a majority of it will end up in the creeks, ponds, and wetlands that are so prevalent here in New York.

However, there are groups throughout the Hudson Valley that are making a difference and making “watershed” the new buzzword. These small watershed groups are driven by the simple idea that the decisions made on the land, our watersheds, directly affect the quality and quantity of water in our groundwater, creeks, ponds and finally the Hudson River. For example, the Fall Kill Watershed Committee, coordinated by Clearwater and supported by a grant from the NYS DEC Hudson River Estuary Program, has spent the last year not only raising awareness about what a watershed is and the impacts we can have on it, but also engaging residents and teaching them exactly what they can do to help.

The Fall Kill Watershed is located entirely in Dutchess County and is comprised of five municipalities. A highly diverse watershed, it begins in the Town of Clinton, covers nearly 50% of the Town of Hyde Park and enters into the Hudson River in the City of Poughkeepsie. It has been plagued with water quality issues for years, from poorly maintained septic systems to littering and dumping. In 2006, a management plan was developed for the watershed which identified specific goals and objectives to help improve the quality of the water in the creek and by doing so the quality of life for those living in the watershed.

In 2008, during the first ever Fall Kill Creek Week, a group of Poughkeepsie High School students and other volunteers participated in conducting a Rapid Trash Assessment. These students cleaned out trash from the Fall Kill, and also counted and identified every piece of garbage and dumped item they found, from bikes and road signs to cigarette butts and candy wrappers. What resulted was a comprehensive look at what exactly was littering the creek through different sections of the city. This remarkable example of neighborhood environmentalism resulted in another clean up of the Fall Kill on April 25, and this time the focus was on collecting glass along with the usual refuse. Interestingly, the 2008 clean up identified that glass, practically all from bottles, made up a third of all the trash collected. Over fifty volunteers showed up and 3 tons of garbage was successfully removed from the creek. The glass that was collected from this year's clean up will be used in a community art project that will be permanently installed in a local children's museum, extending even further the impact that these five students will have in raising awareness, promoting action and igniting change.

Over fifty volunteers removed more than 3 tons of garbage from the creek

July 5-12, 2009 marks the second annual Creek Week – this time around other watershed groups are joining the movement and Dutchess County will be celebrating Watershed Awareness Month for the entire month of July. Seven watershed groups across the county will be organizing educational and fun events throughout the month. In addition, local neighborhood groups will be participating in Adopt-A-Spot clean ups, highlighting the fact that the watershed is more than the creek but also the parks, streets and neighborhoods we live in.

A polluted creek gets people's attention, it is relevant, interesting and cleaning up the trash in and around it is an attainable and rewarding experience. It is obvious, the watershed approach and focusing on our creeks, is an effective way to successfully engage people and help forge the connection between what we do and the quality of the water, and land, we live with.

WHILE THE CHILDREN'S AREA IS FULLY STAFFED DURING THE FESTIVAL, IT IS NOT DESIGNED FOR CHILD CARE. CHILDREN 12 AND UNDER MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY AN ADULT AT ALL TIMES.

The Children's Area is created by the Clearpool Education Center. Clearpool, a program of Green Chimneys, was founded in 1901 as a summer camp offering disadvantaged children a temporary escape from inner city New York. Today, its year-round program provides a "second campus" for its public school partners and other educational and human service organizations. Its programs provide a learning environment that supports the academic, physical and emotional growth of its students through both day and residential programs. Its facilities have been modernized and improved, but still take advantage of the pristine 350-acre surroundings as it continues to foster self-confident, independent thinkers who are motivated to collaborate with others as they explore the world around them.

The Activist Area at this Festival affords not-for-profit organizations the opportunity to share their passion in trying to make the world a better place.

COME PLAY with INVENTIVENESS!

Custom design your own costumes, masks and instruments and join the spontaneous parades. Make music. Surprise yourself with your own ingenuity. Expect the unexpected!

YOUR COLLABORATORS AND FACILIATORS:

Laura (Lou) M. Pollack, a.k.a., Loulabelle, is proud to have been on Pete Seeger's original Hudson River clean-up committee as a teenager in the early 1970s. She's since been a display designer for Barnes & Noble Bookstores in the 1980s, property master and art director for film, TV, and theater, and freelance designer and illustrator for books, greeting cards, clothing, toys and product, business identity development and branding systems, and event planning and installation from small to large scale environments. She is a re-creation artist who refurbishes, re-appropriates and re-assigns meaning to material goods and teaches others how to do this, too.

Paul McMahon is a multi-media visual and performance artist whose work recently opened and is showing at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in NYC. McMahon is an originator whose work excites unanticipated connections and expression.

Max Parker, who hails from a lineage of illustrious artists and musical performers, is an inspired percussionist and musician whose talents stretch in many directions. Separately and as a team, they make music and art and create eclectic, inspired fashions from varied materials. Les Bicyclettes Blanches is inspired from the public bicycles program of Amsterdam.

ARE YOU READY. ARE YOU READY...

to be part of Clearwater's successful efforts in inspiring, educating and activating people?

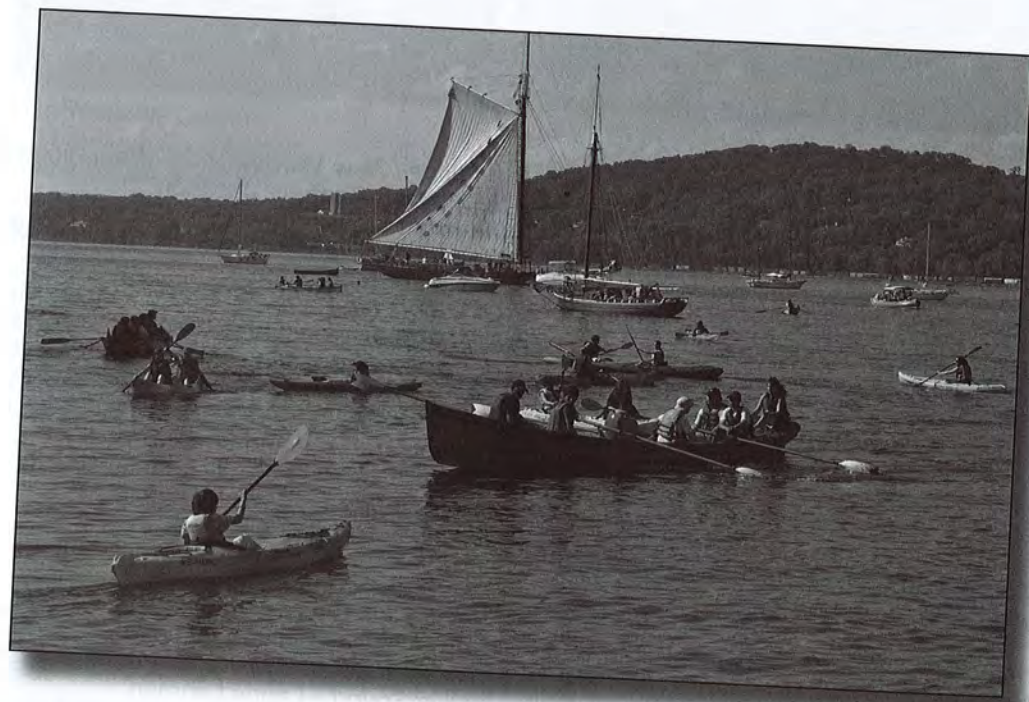

Utilizing the greatest natural resource in the region—the majestic Hudson River—Clearwater has been the grassroots model for producing changes to protect our planet, standing at the forefront of the environmental movement and working to pass landmark legislation like the Clean Water Act and teaching hundreds of thousands about the intricacies of ecological balance.

But the environmental movement is just at its beginning. We have to increase our efforts and attract more people to the cause of promoting green jobs and industries that won't harm our planet. And we need more environmental leaders intent on safeguarding our neighborhoods and communities, leaders who are connected to the natural world and who know how important it is to work together.

Please think about becoming a member of Clearwater and being a part of this work. Or see about some of our volunteer opportunities. Host a house party or pot luck dinner to help raise awareness about Clearwater.

Best of all, come sail aboard the Clearwater, where you'll find the next generation of environmental leaders.
